

A printer intercept apparatus (10) operable to monitor communication between a first system (12) and a printer (14), create a second instance of original signals sent therebetween, and forward the second signals to a second system (16), and do so without interfering with communication or data flow between the first system (12) and printer (14).

5